

West Texas

—where prosperous towns and wide-awake merchants have replaced the picturesque cow-boy and the open range.

STAMFORD

Sixth of a Series of Trade Analyses of the Southwest's Retail Market

Compiled by Holland's Magazine, Dallas, Texas

THE good old days are dead.

Time was when a favored son of West Texas would put bear grease in his hair, gun-oil in his "forty-some-odd," mount his favorite cayuse, and ride into town, prepared to exchange pleasantries with the bartender or shoot out the lights as the occasion demanded.

But alas, the time of straight whiskey, straight shooting, wild cattle, and wilder men is past.

The West Texas lad now dresses like a clothing advertisement, slicks back his hair with some well-known tonic, climbs into his runabout, and takes a sweet young thing to a picture show.

And the sweet young thing—say, she's expensive looking; her hair coiled over her ears, eyebrows straightened, a gown of some shimmering material that makes the poor lad gulp, and a boarding school manner—languidly correct. Yes, the old order changes.

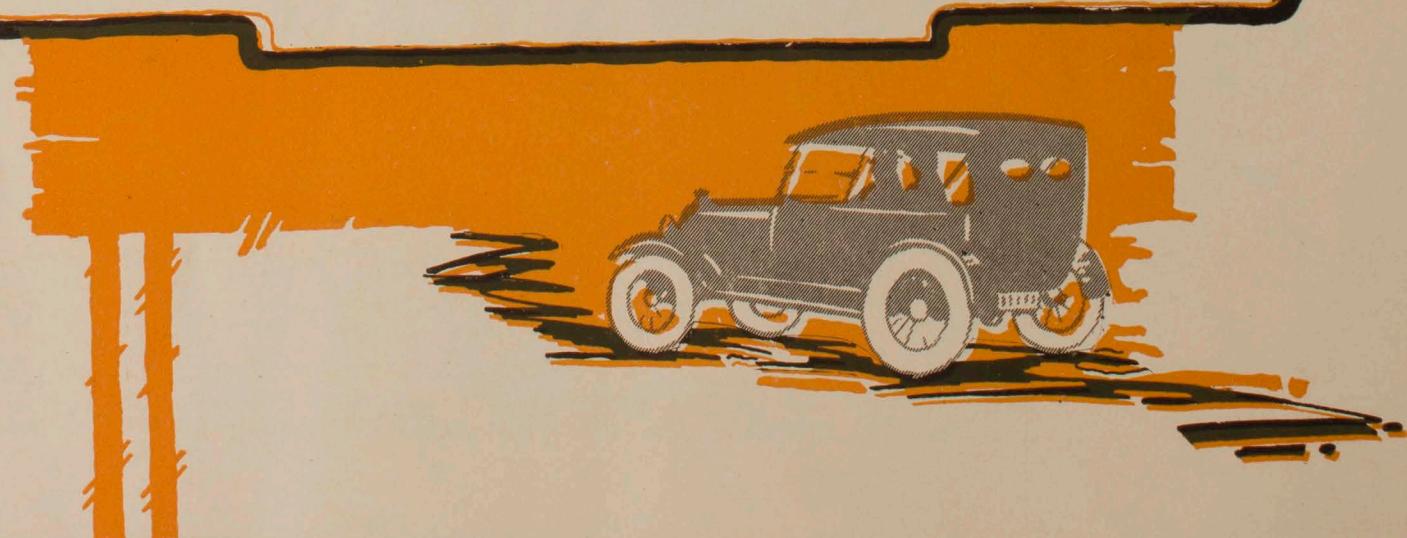

The plains are dotted with prosperous little towns, automobiles have replaced the faithful mustang, the general store has given way to specialty shops carrying the best merchandise in America, and the moving pictures, vaudeville houses, candy kitchens and drug stores have driven the saloon before them.

Here then is the West Texas of today—rich farms, prosperous farmers, enormously swelled bank deposits, wide-awake merchants unable to supply the demand for merchandise, beautiful homes and progressive citizens.

This book is intended to represent, through Stamford, a typical town, the spirit of West Texas. It is an intimate study of the personality of the section—its potentialities and probable future; its production, its retail market, its people—how they live and what they buy.

The romance of the Old West is gone—the romance of the New West begins.

VISITING STAMFORD

A Typical West Texas Town

YOU'LL like Stamford. It is a small town in West Texas, situated in the northeastern corner of Jones county at the intersection of the Roswell Highway and the Ozark Trail.

According to the 1910 census thirty-nine hundred people were living in Stamford—there must be forty-five hundred now, and how they work for that town! They have built a beautiful federal building and park at a cost of fifty thousand dollars, a twenty-five thousand-dollar municipal building, a handsome Carnegie Library and a country club on the outskirts of town.

The people are forward looking in this little city. A hustling Chamber of Commerce has been operating for a long time and a Rotary Club has just been organized. The business section is composed of brick buildings, the streets are all paved down town, and the proprietors of the different establishments are not simply storekeepers—they are wide-awake merchants.

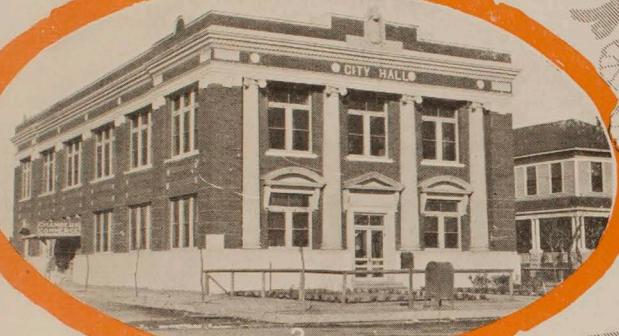

Young West Texans, upon whom the future of Stamford depends, are being taught to be more progressive even than their parents. There are three school buildings in Stamford—two grade schools and a high school. One hundred and forty are enrolled in the high school, three hundred in the grade school.

These schools are as well equipped as the institutions of any large city. They have well-lighted and ventilated rooms, big auditoriums, well-stocked libraries, and large playgrounds. About twelve students leave the high school for college every year.

But Stamford was not always so wealthy and so modern. Let's take a look at the next page and see how it grew up.

The Growth of Stamford

STAMFORD was born when Bob Penick and Ed Hughes hauled lumber from Abilene, a nearby town, and built the Penick-Hughes Hardware and Furniture Store. The next man that came in that direction bought a bill of goods from the new firm.

These pioneering merchants then brought a house over the road from Anson, Texas, started the Bank of Stamford, and were doing business when the railroad came.

This Bank of Stamford was founded in January, 1900. Land was then selling for about two dollars an acre. STAMFORD GREW FROM NOTHING TO A TOWN OF THREE THOUSAND IN THE NEXT YEAR AND LAND NOW SELLS FOR FROM FORTY TO SEVENTY-TWO DOLLARS AN ACRE. The Penick-Hughes Hardware and Furniture Store now does a combined wholesale and retail business of a million dollars yearly, and the Wichita Valley Railroad has a roundhouse in Stamford.

A wonderful growth from what was just a wide place in the road a few years ago, isn't it? But Stamford is just started. Just to give you an idea of how they do things in Stamford take the matter of water supply.

The citizens were not satisfied with the water supply, so they voted four hundred and forty thousand dollars to improve it. They bought a beautiful park and lake eighteen miles from Stamford. The lake will impound twenty-five million cubic feet of water and this plentiful supply will be piped into the town.

But that's not the big thing. They have built a bathing beach on this lake and are going to make the place a summer resort with summer hotels, country clubs, pavilions and bath houses. It will be the only amusement center of its kind in the western part of the state.

People that plan and build ambitious projects of this sort should know how to live well as individuals. We'll visit the residence section of Stamford and see for ourselves.

H

Calling on Mrs. Housewife

SELECTING names at random from the HOL- LAND subscribers in Stamford, we start on our visit to the residence section.

As each lady conducts us through her house we are most forcibly impressed with the "home-like" atmosphere of the place. "Here," we say to ourselves, "is a genuine American home—this is not simply a boarding house for the family as is so often the case in large cities."

We see the tinted walls—hardwood floors—well-filled bookcases—leather-covered furniture—the open fireplace—the piano and the talking machine and we can picture the quiet, comfortable life the people live.

There in the big living room Father and Mother read in the evening; little Willie, with both elbows on the dining-room table, is struggling through his school work; daughter is practicing scales on the piano, and the cat is curled in front of the fire, dreaming of fat mice and good hunting.

It is difficult to describe the atmosphere of a real home—it is too complex, too intangible, but everyone who has visited in a small town of the Southwest will know just what we mean.

Someone has said, "Home makes the man." This should be taken a step further and read, "Woman makes the home that makes the man."

So in our capacity as "friendly investigators," we will try to get our information first-hand from Mrs. Housewife. She has in every sense created the home and with a firm hold on the purse-strings, spends about ninety per cent of the "old man's" earnings.

On the next page is a list of the products Mrs. Housewife told us she used.

A Survey of Articles Found in the Homes We Visited

We visited ten homes in Stamford. These homes were not picked because they were in any way pretentious, but were selected at random from the list of HOLLAND'S subscribers in the town.

The following survey shows what we found. It is not presented as a complete list of articles used in the homes of Stamford, but simply represents the class of merchandise that Mrs. Housewife buys for her home in a typical West Texas town.

The Buying Power of Stamford

We have wandered around getting the atmosphere of the place, sizing up Stamford in general and seeing how the people live—let's get down to cases now and talk buying power and business.

The year 1920 finds West Texas in the best condition in the history of that section. There is an unprecedented era of prosperity. The grazing facilities are the greatest in history and the grain sorghum crop and the cotton crop surpass anything known before in value and quantity.

The small grain crop alone will pay off the indebtedness of the farmer and the cotton will be a surplus. As a result the farmer has paid all his obligations, the merchants have their accounts clear and are selling in advance of deliveries, the bank deposits are swelled enormously and everybody in West Texas is exclaiming, "Aint nature grand!"

Consider Stamford. There are approximately twenty thousand acres in cotton and twenty thousand acres in grain contributory to Stamford.

The average yield of cotton has been exceptionally high in West Texas—about one half to the acre. Upon a most conservative estimate, one half bale of cotton will bring seventy-five dollars after the cost of picking and applying the cost of the seed.

With twenty thousand acres in cotton directly contributing to Stamford this means ONE MILLION AND HALF DOLLARS of new wealth in the Stamford territory.

In addition the twenty thousand acres in grain are yielding fifteen bushels of wheat to the acre and a ton and a half of maize to the acre. Then there is also a fine crop of corn, oats, peanuts, etc.

The peanut industry is not to be passed over lightly. There is an ever increasing crop of peanuts in West Texas, for which there is an enormous market. Proctor & Gamble are putting up a big plant in Dallas for the extraction of nut and vegetable oils, making a market right at home. Jones county, in which Stamford is situated, shipped eighty cars of peanuts last year.

And now we come to the business for which West Texas has always been famous—the cattle business. The well known Swenson Ranch—the only ranch in the world doing a mail order business, has its headquarters in Stamford. This ranch ships eight thousand to ten thousand cattle a year to the corn belt. The calf crop averages twelve thousand a year. Mr. F. S. Hastings, manager of this ranch, and a nationally recognized authority in the cattle business, says that grazing facilities in West Texas are the greatest in the history of the section.

Mr. R. V. Colbert, a prominent banker in Stamford, has a ranch just out of town on which he raises nothing but thoroughbred cattle. One cow off of the Colbert ranch sold for $3,350 in Kansas City and another for $2,400. Mr. Colbert topped the Kansas City market in 1914.

You see buying power, don't you—new wealth right off the land, ready to be exchanged for merchandise of all kinds?

The general prosperity has reflected itself in the bank deposits of Stamford. In 1918 bank deposits were $550,000. At the beginning of 1920 Stamford has over THREE MILLION DOLLARS IN BANK DEPOSITS.

Look across at the next page and see where and how this money is spent in Stamford.

The Retail Market

We can't give a detailed account of every business in Stamford—we'd like to, but you haven't got the time. The best way to get an idea of the stores is to walk around and take a look at the window displays. If the windows are attractive we'll go in.

BAKER-BRYANT CO.—This store certainly has attractive windows. There are Ely Walker Shirts, Hanan Shoes, and Hart, Schaffner & Marx Clothes, all tastefully arranged. The Baker-Bryant Co. is a West Texas institution. They have a chain of ten stores operating in this territory. Mr. Bryant of this concern said, "The farmers of West Texas are more prosperous this year than they have ever been before. Mr. Pratt, manager of the clothing department said, "The only trouble is in getting enough good merchandise of well known makes. Our customers know what they want." Mr. Pratt has an agency for M. Born & Co. and he took orders for three suits the morning we were there.

PETE'S CANDY KITCHEN—As we pass Pete's place there is such a refreshing display of Circle A gingerale in the window that we go in and have a drink. This confectionery is spotlessly clean, the clerks are attentive and courteous, and the store does a thriving business. If you live in the north you don't know what a cool confectionery means to the perspiring Southerner.

DOBYN'S JEWELRY STORE—This is one of the most attractive stores in Stamford. The show cases are really beautiful and the store is luxuriously furnished. Mr. Dobyns told us that he drew trade from twenty miles around Stamford. The general prosperity has evidenced itself in his business. He is selling La Tosca Pearls—fine silver, etc., and the demand is large. He also told us that his customers ask for merchandise they know. For instance every one calls for Krementz collar buttons and cuff links by name.

S. L. FLEMING GROCERY CO.—In one window of this store there was an inviting display of Karo Syrup, in the other window C. E. Morse & Co. Seeds were featured. Frankly, we have never seen a more attractive grocery store than this. Mr. Fleming is a really progressive merchant. When we went in he had just received shipment of an adding machine. He told us he wanted to handle only well known brands of goods.

BUNKLEY DRUG STORE—In the windows of this store there was an attractive display of Carters Ink—Wahl Tempoint Pen and the Eversharp Pencil. The store was crowded when we went in, the soda fountain was doing a rushing business and several ladies were buying toilet articles.

LARCHE GROCERY CO.—In the windows of this store were displayed—Karo Syrup, Argo Starch, Mary Jane Syrup, Kingsford Corn Starch, Pindapan Peanut Shortening and Mazola Salad and Cooking Oil. Mr. Larche is doing a large volume of business and is a firm believer in advertised merchandise. As he expressed it: "It takes less time to sell."

CENTRAL WEST DRUG STORE—The windows of this store featured Eberhard Faber Pencils and Pen Holders and Stafford's and Carter's Inks. Mrs. Donaldson, the proprietor of this attractive store said that in the sale of toilet articles—face powder, perfume, face cream, rouge, etc., the higher priced brands were the best sellers. She said that women imitated one another and that the well known, expensive, toilet articles were much in demand.

McDANIELS DRY GOODS CO.—In the window of this store there was a lovely display of Gage Hats. Mr. McDaniels said that his income tax was all that was worrying him, and from the crowded condition of his store we can well believe him. Mr. McDaniels was using moving picture slides to advertise the well known brands he handles.

MRS. E. C. HOOD—LADIES' READY TO WEAR—Mitchell Dresses and Gossard Corsets were displayed in the windows of this store. This is a real feminine shop where timid men are not wanted. While we were standing there a young lady bought a bill of goods, the price of which made the bachelor in the party glad he was not married. Mrs. Hood says that she can handle only high grade merchandise for her customers.

ORR'S MEN'S FURNISHING STORE—Arrow Collars and Stetson Hats were featured in the windows of this up to date haberdashery. This is a regular man's shop carrying the best merchandise in America.

BARROW FURNITURE CO.—The windows of this store are the most attractive in Stamford. One window features Armstrong's Linoleum, another the Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet and in the third window is a wonderfully well arranged Columbia Talking Machine display. There may be larger Furniture stores than this one but there are none better.

PENICK-HUGHES HARDWARE & FURNITURE CO.—This is the store that figured so largely in the development of Stamford. In the windows were displayed Universal Percolator, Universal Vacuum Bottle, Mirro Aluminum Ware, Chinamel Furniture Polish, Victor Talking Machines, and Remington Shells and Guns. Mr. Penick said, "We furnish them from the cradle to the grave—baby buggies to caskets."

Drug and Jewelry Stores

A drug store is a meeting place in the small town—it is the open forum where politics and politicians are “cussed” and discussed. It also is the “beauty market” for the ladies in these small towns where there are no beauty parlors. There are three drug stores in Stamford and one jewelry store. Here is what they sell.

Getting the Right Perspective

You have used binoculars—you know that in order to get proper vision you must adjust the lens to the size and distance of the thing you view.

We have tried in this book to adjust your business sight to the Southwest. We have held, close in front of you, so that you might see it in all detail, a typical Southwestern town.

The Southwest, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, and New Mexico, has five billion dollars to spend in 1920. This money will be exchanged for merchandise in the hundreds of small towns of the Southwest like Stamford. If we have given you the right perspective you will wish to reach this market.

HOLLAND'S MAGAZINE is the medium. The builders of HOLLAND'S MAGAZINE had the right perspective. They knew that the Southwestern market was a small-town market—that 90% of the people lived in small towns and in the rural districts.

Today nearly two hundred thousand of the better homes in the small towns of the Southwest are regular-paid-in-advance subscribers to HOLLAND'S. The influence of HOLLAND'S MAGAZINE in the Southwest is a responsibility. HOLLAND'S is so closely linked with the individual community in the Southwest—its influence is so powerful in the homes throughout this section, that we must carefully edit even our advertising.

We guarantee the advertising that appears in HOLLAND'S—our people expect it. This is the price of leadership.

If you have a worthy article to sell to the home or for the personal use of any member of the family HOLLAND'S will help you to sell in the SOUTHWEST. Remember the Southwest is the richest, fastest growing section of the country and the buying power is in the small towns.

You cannot reach the buying power of the Southwest, economically and effectively through any medium or combination of media without the use of HOLLAND'S MAGAZINE.

Get the right perspective!
